

The session aims at making the point on our understanding of the relationships between the development of folds and fault zones, the mechanisms and history of rock strain acquisition from the macroscopic to the microscopic scales, the orientations and magnitudes of stresses and the fluids that flowed within the rocks and interacted with them. We invite contributions covering these aspects, from field-based case studies to modeling.